Miller Environmental Group is Providing Critical Infrastructure and Support to Hurricane Relief Efforts in Puerto Rico, US Virgin Islands and Florida

PRESS RELEASE OCT 9, 2017 13:15 EDT

CALVERTON, N.Y., October 9, 2017 (NewsWire.com) - Miller Environmental Group, Inc. (MEG) is actively supporting the relief efforts in the aftermath of hurricanes Irma and Maria.

MEG has been contracted to provide over 2.5 Megawatts of emergency electric generation power to the response and recovery effort in Puerto Rico; sufficient electric capacity to power approximately 3000 homes. The equipment is being rushed to the devastated island aboard heavy lift cargo aircraft and ocean-going vessels.

"MEG has been working around the clock to support the response efforts," said Jerry Coogan, VP of Operations for MEG.

MEG was also contracted by a private industrial client to transport critical equipment and supplies into Florida, post-Hurricane Irma in support of the recovery operation. "Being there for our customers in a time of need is the foundation of our company. We are proud to support the needs of those affected by Hurricanes Irma and Maria," commented Mark Miller, President and CEO.
