

CSX Emergency Response Field Services Manager Award

This award is being given to Mark Lucy of Miller Environmental Group. Over the past year, Mark, through his position with Miller Environmental Group, has played an integral role in assisting CSX successfully manage several critical incidents. In March 2018, a series of severe storms and severe weather moved through the East Coast. Extremely high winds were a part of one weather incident, in particular. During this incident, a train was stopped on the Susquehanna River Bridge in Perryville, MD, due to the weather. While stopped, several cars were blown off the bridge into the river. Upon being contacted by CSX, Mark facilitated providing all of the on-scene equipment for the maritime recovery of the cars, to include a command post, and specialty boats. He also provided all safety equipment related to water operations. He was able to source the commercial diving group and side scan sonar operator needed to locate the train cars in the river. Mark also made the arrangement for barge mounted cranes and tug boats to recover the train cars once they were located. All of this was done under extreme cold temperatures and continued high winds and a subsequent snow storm; not ideal to say the least. His commitment to assisting CSX through this event never wavered. This was all essential in the safe, successful and timely conclusion of this event, with no injuries. Mark was also instrumental in restoring the sight of the derailment, to better conditions than before the event.

Mark has been able to source items for incidents, when no one else is able to provide us what we need. Mark goes above and beyond with any project or incident, and always displays a "can do" attitude to help in any way we need, no matter the conditions or situation. Mark has excellent communication skills and is always easy to work with. He acts as a true partner to CSX, and works towards a positive conclusion under, sometimes, difficult and less than ideal circumstances.
